ERMITA, the incumbent administration, has a long way to go to win a second term, but it has a good chance of winning a third term, according to a survey of 1,000 voters conducted by the Philippine Social Data Center (PSDC) last week.

Ermita's lead over its closest rival, the opposition, is 20 percentage points, according to the survey. This is a significant lead, especially considering that the survey was conducted in a relatively short period of time.

By Samuel B. Maraga

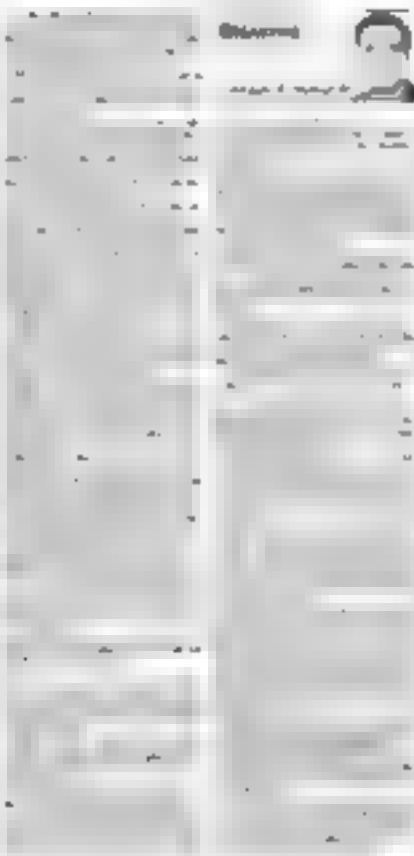

Philippines, September 11, 2001

Twelve firms, including MetraPac unit and Ayala Property, are vying for a 10-year contract to operate the Subic-Clark tollway, a project that will connect the two cities via a toll road.

The project is being developed by the Philippine National Road & Tollway Authority (PNRTA) and is expected to be completed by 2003. The tollway will be a key link in the national road network and is expected to significantly reduce travel time between Subic and Clark.

The firms competing for the contract include MetraPac, Ayala Property, and several other local and international companies. The selection process is currently underway, and the winning firm will be announced in the near future.

Philippine Kitchens

Philippine kitchens are a blend of traditional and modern, reflecting the country's rich cultural heritage and diverse influences.

Traditional kitchens often feature a large, open hearth or stove, where food is cooked over an open flame. This setup allows for the use of large pots and pans, which are essential for many traditional dishes.

Modern kitchens, on the other hand, incorporate contemporary appliances and materials, such as stainless steel and granite. They often include a refrigerator, oven, and sink, making them more functional and hygienic.

Despite the changes, the heart of the Philippine kitchen remains the same: a place where food is prepared with love and care, bringing families together.
